

American River Cherry Company

Waiver of Liability

Season: May-July 2008

Picking berries and cherries may or may not by its nature be a hazardous activity, but occasionally an injury may occur. Amongst the myriad of things that might happen, you might trip and fall, get stung by a bee, get a berry-vine-thorn in your finger, drown in the pond, eat too many berries or cherries and get a tummy ache, find a bug in your berries, get sunburned, break into a sweat, or even get dive bombed by an irate creature of the avian nature whose dinner you have just purloined. Not to mention all sorts of other wildlife—squirrels, rabbits, lizards, snakes, Bigfoot, etc. Of a serious note in any event when you and your children enter the orchard, Koi pond, berry patch or premises,

YOU ASSUME ALL RISK OF INJURY OF ANY KIND!

By signing this agreement, you agree to assume all risks of injury, harm or damage, whether disclosed or undisclosed, whether obvious or hidden, whether natural or manmade, whether to property or persons, and waive any rights or claims arising out of such injury, risk, harm or damage, against the American River Cherry Company, Reginald D. or Shirley J. Rice, and or their heirs, administrators, representatives, executors, successors, transferees, and assigns. You also agree to abide by any posted signs regarding harvest exclusions.
